

Alma Verde

Alma Verde is an organization committed to sustainability. Through talks and workshops, it seeks to educate and motivate communities to adopt responsible practices with the environment and people.

Measures Taken at School

- After Alma Verde's talk, we decided to implement concrete measures to promote responsible consumption:
- Awareness of the environmental impact of daily consumption.
- Practical activities such as workshops, teamwork, and dynamics.

Sustainable Fashion

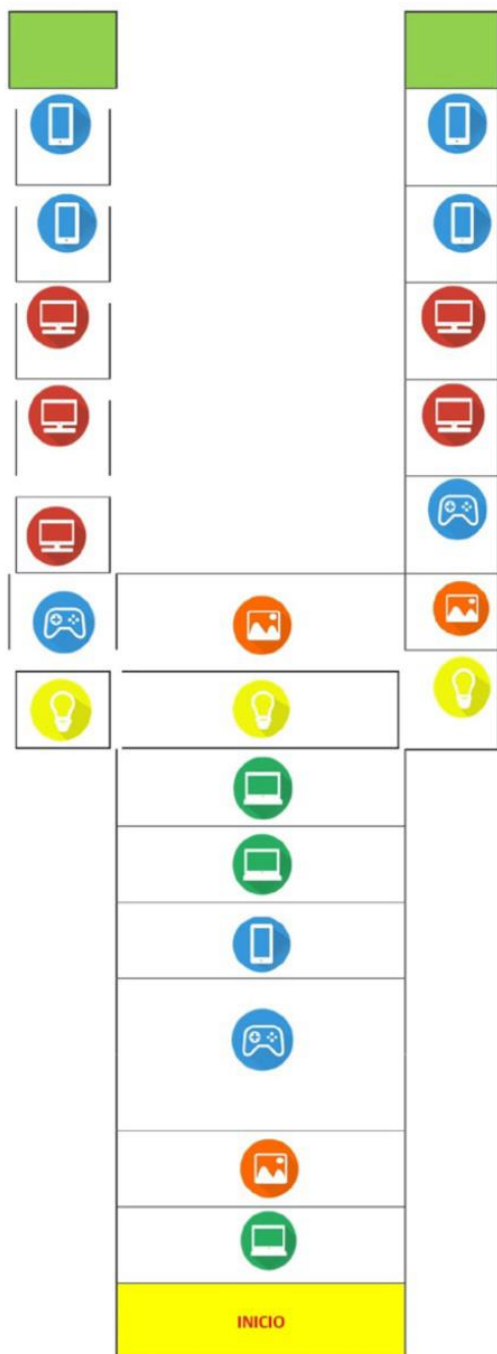

- This workshop was key to reflecting on:
- Our clothing consumption.
- The impact of the textile industry on the environment and people.
- Games and debates were used to raise key questions before buying.

Sustainable Fashion Show

- Our next activity will be to create a sustainable fashion style for all ESO courses.
- In this fashionable style, clothing second-hand that meet the requirements of being sustainable, will be the protagonists, and all bodies will be suitable to parade

The Technological Circle

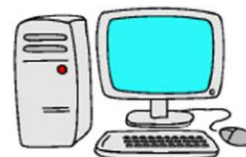

- This activity was carried out with 5th grade students from schools in our district on the consumption of electronic and technological devices.
- To make it educational and fun, we created a board game where students had to correctly answer multiple-choice questions to advance on the board.

Shop El Colletero

- El Colletero It is a local store in Logroño where we buy the products ecological and local instead of buying products in large quantities super markets since they are not ecological and the treatment with their suppliers is worse.

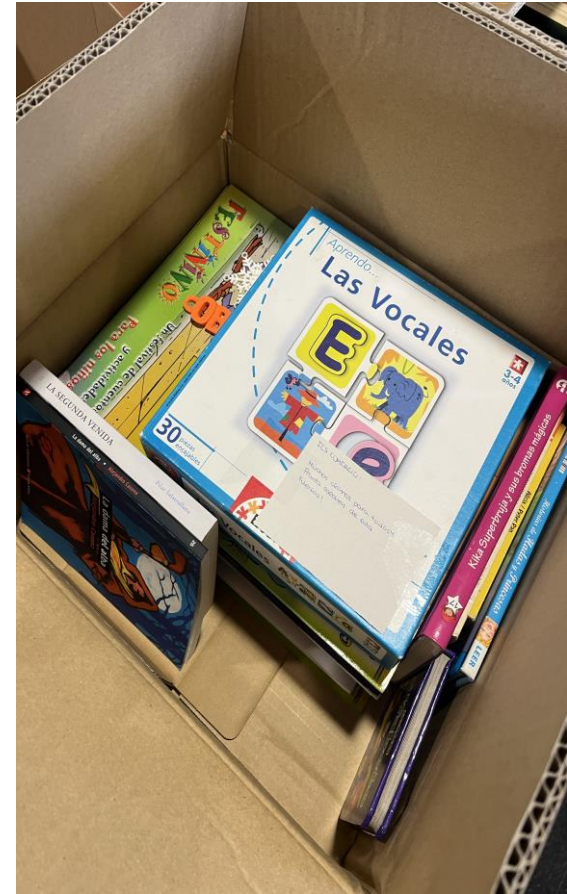

Solidarity Market

- This social market, led by first-year high school students, contributes to both social well-being and environmental preservation. It not only promotes the reuse of products, but also fosters values such as solidarity, sustainability, and community commitment.

Book Donation for DANA

- These floods have caused the loss of essential educational materials in many schools, leaving hundreds of students without access to learning resources. In this situation, the donation of books by all students is not only a show of solidarity, but also an action that promotes responsible consumption by reusing and redistributing resources instead of discarding them.

Final Reflection

- With these activities, we achieved:
- Involving the entire educational community.
- Learning about the environmental and social impact of consumption.
- Encouraging responsible purchasing decisions.
- These initiatives have left a positive impact on our school, promoting real change.
